On the Cover: George Wythe, right, was the nation’s first professor of law. John Marshall, left, who would later become “the Great Chief Justice,” was among Wythe’s first students at William & Mary.
William & Mary holds a special place in American history as the nation’s first law school. Thomas Jefferson had the original idea, believing that university-trained lawyers could provide the leadership necessary to the success of the fledgling nation.

We have since then created a compelling reputation as a top law school. Mindful of tradition and dedicated to innovation, we host everything from an amazing rare book collection to the most technologically advanced educational trial and appellate courtroom in the world.

We’re known for strong teaching, scholarly excellence, and innovative clinical and legal-practice programs. We’re committed to training highly skilled and ethical lawyers—citizen lawyers—who graduate ready to make a difference for the greater good.

Our faculty comprises internationally recognized scholars and legal trailblazers who understand that teaching is paramount. Their influential scholarship, which helps shape the development of our legal system, informs their teaching whether in the classroom or one-on-one.

Our professors know students by name, not merely as faces passing in the hall or people on a list. We are a close-knit community dedicated to providing an outstanding education at a reasonable price and ensuring that each of our graduates is well prepared to enter the legal profession.

We hope that you will consider joining our community of citizen lawyers.

A.B., Princeton University; M.A.R., Yale Divinity School; J.D., Yale Law School; Ph.D. (History), Yale University; one of the nation’s leading constitutional historians; author or editor of seven books, including Jim Crow Moves North: The Battle over Northern School Segregation, 1865–1954 (Cambridge University Press) and Redefining Equality (Oxford University Press)
First in the Nation

In 1779, against the backdrop of the Revolutionary War, Virginia Governor and William & Mary alumnus Thomas Jefferson urged William & Mary’s Board of Visitors to establish a chair in law. The appointment of Jefferson’s mentor, George Wythe, as the College’s—and the nation’s—first law professor marked the founding of the first law school in America. The training of American lawyers in a university setting had begun.

Citizen Lawyers

Jefferson’s actions were pivotal for American legal education and for the role of lawyers in our society. Jefferson and Wythe believed that lawyers have an obligation not only to their clients and the legal profession but also to the greater good.

William & Mary’s citizen-lawyer tradition resonates today throughout our community. Our graduates are effective, skilled, and creative attorneys who also do a great deal of pro bono work and extend their philanthropic reach far and wide. They are citizen lawyers in every sense of the term.

Graduates leave here making a difference from day one of their new careers. It’s a responsibility they proudly fulfill.
I am the Community Service Chair for the Black Law Student Association. As a group, we held an international book drive that benefited children and adults in South Africa, and we partnered with the Election Law Society on its Revive My Vote initiative. William & Mary is an interactive, inclusive community of scholarship and friendship that molds a certain kind of person, lawyer, and experience, exemplifying the citizen-lawyer concept.

S. Douglas Bunch ’06
Associate, Cohen Milstein Sellers & Toll (Washington, DC); Co-Founder and Chairman, Global Playground

Being a citizen lawyer is about more than simply taking pro bono cases. It’s about engaging yourself with the world around you, identifying a human need, and then using your skills and abilities—as a lawyer and as a person of sound judgment—to respond. That’s why I co-founded Global Playground; I felt an obligation to reinvest a fraction of what I’ve been given to make the world a better place.

In order to help the community around you, you must first be able to speak to and understand those who need your help. I believe William & Mary does a great job fostering an environment where students can learn the intellectual and social skills necessary to become excellent citizens and effective citizen lawyers.
Learning is everywhere at William & Mary Law School, both inside and outside the classroom. The Wolf Law Library’s spacious architecture, extensive print and electronic resources, and expert staff make it a welcoming place for study and research. We also host the world’s most technologically advanced educational courtroom, the McGlothlin Courtroom.

Come here and you’ll discover another gem, our Legal Practice Program, a required set of courses that develop practical lawyering skills and professional responsibility. The three-semester program will allow you to cultivate first-hand knowledge of the law in a small group setting and will increase your skills as you work with experienced legal writing faculty and law librarians.

During the 1L year, you will master objective and persuasive writing through individualized one-on-one writing conferences with your writing professor. In the spring semester of your 2L year, you will take your skills to the next level by choosing a specialized, upper-level course of study, such as pre-trial criminal law, pre-trial civil law, or transactional law.

William & Mary Law School boasts five well-respected, student-edited law journals. Through journal work, students hone their writing while contributing to the world of legal scholarship. More than 340 students are involved in journals each year, and 190 of them earn credit as a board or staff member.
Externships are important ways to earn academic credit, gain practical experience, and develop professional contacts by assisting judges and practicing attorneys. You may earn externship credit during any semester after your first year while in residence at the Law School or by exterining full time in metropolitan Washington, DC, during the fall semester of your third year.

Working as a Legal Practice Fellow has allowed me to mentor 13 first-year law students. So many second- and third-year students helped me during my first year of law school that I was certain I wanted some sort of teaching assistant role for the incoming first-year class. I think every second- and third-year law student should become a mentor in some way to pay forward the help we received our first year.

Applying the principles we’ve learned to hypotheticals in class has been challenging but effective. Not only does it help us prepare for law school exams, it synthesizes all we have learned over the course of the semester. I feel very fortunate to have had professors that teach the material through a hands-on approach.
From helping veterans get the benefits they earned to briefing and arguing constitutional claims in the United States Courts of Appeals, our students have the opportunity to practice their lawyering skills and professional judgment while working closely with supervising attorneys. These professors are leaders in their fields who provide close mentorship, guided reflection, and exploration of professional responsibility, all within the context of client representation.

Our clinical program—featuring eight clinics with more than 150 positions for 2L and 3L students—addresses the unmet legal needs of our community while strengthening skills and a sense of responsibility among our students. We expect much of our clinic students, and they do not disappoint. Their dedication to their clinic work is inspirational and forms a solid foundation for their future pro bono work and ethical practice of law.

Appellate and Supreme Court Clinic

Appellate and Supreme Court students engage in appellate practice in the federal Courts of Appeals and the US Supreme Court, focusing on First and Fourth Amendment cases.

Domestic Violence Clinic

The Domestic Violence Clinic provides students the opportunity to interview victims and witnesses, provide advice and counsel to those victims, and represent them in court.

Elder Law Clinic

Elder Law Clinic students assist low-income seniors in planning for long-term care, creating documents to ensure their privacy and protection, advocating for necessary services and resources, and addressing their immediate legal needs.

Family Law Clinic

Family Law Clinic students work in the Williamsburg office of the Legal Aid Society of Eastern Virginia, providing legal services to low-income clients that address divorce, custody, support, and equitable distribution matters.

Special Education Advocacy Clinic

Veterans Benefits Clinic
In the Appellate and Supreme Court Clinic, we represented a client in a petition that urged the US Supreme Court to weigh in on an issue that affects the speech and privacy rights of indigent litigants in the United States every single day. Working alongside leading appellate attorneys to author a petition from scratch, reply to the government’s response, and have the Justices review our argument was an uncommon, empowering learning experience.

The Federal Tax Clinic teaches students federal tax practice and procedure and prepares them to assist in the representation of low-income Virginia taxpayers.

Innocence Project Clinic students participate in the legal investigation and research of inmate claims of actual innocence.

The Lewis B. Puller, Jr., Veterans Benefits Clinic assists veterans with claims and appeals for disability compensation from the Department of Veterans Affairs, as well as discharge upgrades. The Puller Clinic has captured national attention with its interdisciplinary approach and has been hailed on Capitol Hill as a model for law schools across the country.

The Parents Engaged for Learning Equality (PELE) Special Education Advocacy Clinic assists children with special needs and their families with eligibility, Individualized Education Programs, discipline matters, mediation, and administrative hearings.

Faculty

William & Mary Law faculty are personally invested in each student’s education and success. Their teaching philosophies embody the Law School’s ideal of the citizen lawyer, as George Wythe did more than 200 years ago.

In keeping with that tradition, our faculty conduct research because they want to effect change; they teach to prepare a new generation of lawyers to do the same. Our faculty comprises nationally and internationally recognized experts in many fields of law, and they have written hundreds of notable books, treatises, and articles.

Apart from our full-time faculty, we also boast an impressive adjunct professorship made up of practicing lawyers and public officials with decades of hands-on experience in the ethical practice of law. These professors help set the citizen-lawyer standard, proving by example that good lawyers are vitally engaged in the life of the local community, state, nation, and world.

Immigration & Citizenship is among my favorite courses to teach because it deals with complicated social and legal issues. In this class, students have the opportunity to think about and play with ideas involving the relationship between membership status and legal rights. I also love that this class enables students to see how constitutional, statutory, and administrative law interact to regulate a subject area.

Go to law school to bring about change. So very many of the vital issues facing our society revolve around the law. A good legal education—of the caliber we offer here at William & Mary—will enable you to thoughtfully evaluate those issues whether as an advocate, a counselor, a judge, a legislator, or an academic, and more fundamentally as a citizen lawyer.

Institutes and Programs

We know you want the most fulfilling law school experience possible. Our seven research centers foster scholarship, assist courts and judges, and provide opportunities to work on legal projects around the world.

The Election Law Program helps state court judges understand the unique nature of election litigation, hosts an annual symposium, and works closely with its student arm, the William & Mary Election Law Society, to run an election law speaker series and plan other events.

The Property Rights Project promotes the exchange of ideas between scholars and members of the property rights bar through lectures and an annual conference, recognizing outstanding contributions of individuals to the field of property rights scholarship.

The Institute of Bill of Rights Law encourages discussion of constitutional issues. Experts from diverse disciplines—lawyers, journalists, historians, political scientists, economists, sociologists, and politicians—are brought together for serious discussion and debate at events such as our annual Supreme Court Preview.

The Virginia Coastal Policy Center is an interdisciplinary initiative in which students participate in the development and execution of policies addressing the legal, scientific, social, and economic challenges confronting Virginia’s coastal resources and communities.

Executive Director of OneVirginia 2021: Virginians for Fair Redistricting, a multi-partisan effort to amend the Virginia Constitution to establish an independent, impartial redistricting commission to draw political districts.

While an undergraduate at William & Mary, Brian co-founded the student voting advocacy group Virginia21, the first political action committee run solely by students. As a law student, he was founding Editor of the State of Elections Blog, served as President of the Election Law Society, and was a member of William & Mary’s winning team for the Virginia Redistricting Competition.

The Election Law Program prepared me to push for major changes in the way Virginia’s election law operates. It introduced me to the top lawyers arguing the most important cases in election law today. The curriculum allowed me to dive in deeply with Professor Rebecca Green and other experts in the field to dissect the legal history of election law and craft arguments for its future. My peers in class have all gone on to contribute in this field—it’s quite a network. William & Mary Law School is the only place to gain this incredible level of practical and scholarly expertise in election law.

Competition Teams

In addition to taking advantage of our institutes and programs, our students also demonstrate a healthy team spirit. Join a competition team and you can expand your knowledge and skills while competing against the best students from other schools at regional, national, and international events. Membership on our teams is a highly sought after honor and accomplishment.

The Alternative Dispute Resolution Team focuses on client counseling and methods of dispute resolution such as negotiation, mediation, and arbitration.

The Moot Court Program promotes student development and refinement of both oral advocacy and brief-writing skills.

The National Trial Team provides extensive trial advocacy training, from evidentiary objections and fundamental trial skills to sophisticated trial strategy and persuasion.

The Transactional Law Team helps students explore and improve transactional law ability, skills, and interest through preparation for and participation in transactional law competitions.
Global Focus

William & Mary prepares the next generation of lawyers to practice in our increasingly globalized world through innovative courses and research as well as concrete field experience. You will learn more about the legal systems of other countries, study with international faculty, sharpen your language skills, and gain a perspective on law through the lens of another culture.

Our internationally focused research centers and programs offer a variety of lectures, panels, and conferences that examine issues before US courts, provide perspectives on international legal systems, and address how law affects human rights and shapes democracy.

The Center for Legal and Court Technology is dedicated to improving the administration of justice through technology by providing education, training, and courtroom design.

The Human Security Law Center fosters discussion of national defense, environmental security, and human rights issues to meet the growing needs of international law and alternative dispute resolution, through advanced legal forensics.

The Program in Comparative Legal Studies and Post-Conflict Peacebuilding focuses on legal and policy issues facing countries recovering from conflict, and in the summer of 2015 facilitated internships for 24 students in 14 countries, two states, and Washington, DC.
I spent the summer of 2014 in Baghdad, Iraq, where I worked with two senior legal advisors in the Iraq Access to Justice Program, part of the USAID’s effort to improve access to justice for vulnerable and disadvantaged people in that country. One of my primary projects was to conduct comparative research on legal aid systems in Africa, Europe, the Middle East, and the United States. This internship gave me a perspective on international law that I couldn’t have experienced without the Program in Comparative Legal Studies and Post-Conflict Peacebuilding.

Working with local attorneys, I made substantive changes to two draft laws, one of which was submitted to the Kyrgyz Parliament.

More than 4,600 students from law schools across the United States have participated in our five-week Summer Abroad Program in Madrid, Spain, in the past 25 years. We also offer Semester Exchange Programs where students may apply to study during the fall of their third year at eight universities around the world located in Austria, China, Hong Kong, Japan, Luxembourg, New Zealand, and Spain.

William & Mary Law School students are always making the most of a unique educational and social experience. They arrive from all over the world, quickly becoming valued members of our community and taking advantage of everything the Law School has to offer.

More than 50 student organizations and myriad lectures and conferences ensure there is a lot to do outside the classroom. Students can support the Bone Marrow Drive, participate in the Day of Caring, and watch their classmates perform in Law Cappella. They take part in the Student Bar Association’s annual ski trip, the Black Law Student Association’s talent show, and the Public Service Fund’s auction, where the proceeds help fund summer public service internships.

Local Attractions

Students can also take advantage of William & Mary’s other treasure, Williamsburg. The ‘Burg has a charm you just won’t find anywhere else. In addition to world-famous attractions Colonial Williamsburg and Busch Gardens, this historic college town provides a wide assortment of restaurants, parks, coffee shops, golf courses, and shopping. All this and more—only an hour from Richmond, Norfolk, and Virginia Beach. Add a mild climate, and Williamsburg is a wonderful place to live and learn.
After living and working in a big city after college, I knew I wanted to join a smaller and more close-knit community for law school. William & Mary was the perfect fit. The community provides a supportive and collegiate environment, while also offering an unrivaled historical backdrop. The unique blend of collegiality and history makes William & Mary the perfect place to study law.

Housing Options

Next to the Law School, the Lettie Pate Whitehead Evans Graduate Complex, known as the Gradplex, offers two-, three-, and four-bedroom furnished apartments. These William & Mary residences are assigned as space is available, and rent includes all utilities, cable TV, and high-speed Internet. A wide assortment of affordably priced rental homes, apartments, and condominiums are also available off campus.

When it comes to your career, there is no such thing as one size fits all. Whether your goal is to practice with a law firm in Virginia, a government agency in DC, a legal aid organization in New York, or a nonprofit in California, the Office of Career Services (OCS) can help you develop the skills necessary for a successful job search and formulate a personalized action plan for pursuing your chosen career. We offer a high level of individualized support to every student.

What can you expect from your relationship with OCS?

• One-on-one advising with experienced career advisors. All OCS advisors are attorneys who bring to their roles significant experience in various sectors of the legal profession.

• Career planning programs and workshops to assist students in their job searches, including small group résumé writing, cover letter writing, and interview skills workshops in Legal Practice classes.

• Access to Symplicity, our online jobs database.

• Opportunities to connect with alumni and employers through our annual Alumni Mock Interview Program; Smart Manners Etiquette Reception and Dinner; the Law School’s Co-Counsel Program, which pairs students with alumni mentors; on- and off-campus interview programs; and a variety of information sessions and programs throughout the year that regularly bring alumni and employers to the William & Mary campus.

• Support for public service careers. During the summer of 2015, the Law School awarded public service fellowships totaling almost $349,000 to 131 rising 2Ls and 3Ls. The Loan Repayment Assistance Program, which provides a maximum of $5,000 in loan forgiveness annually for up to three years, helps make public service more viable for our alumni.

I had a blast during the 1L mock-interview program when I interviewed with a William & Mary Law alumnus who works at the Department of Justice. The interview was more like a conversation, and I learned a lot about my strengths and weaknesses in interviews. He even emailed me with job opportunities after the interview based on our conversation! I feel extremely fortunate to have had the experience and to have the feedback of a working attorney.

Employment status categories and definitions are those used by the American Bar Association. A long-term position is one that does not have a definite or indefinite term of less than one year. All numbers reflect information reported to the American Bar Association as of March 15, 2015, and includes 24 graduates working on a full-time, long-term basis through the William & Mary Law School Public Service Post-Graduate Fellowship Program (PGF Program).
Powerful Education, Great Value

William & Mary Law School’s competitively priced tuition and fees and the area’s relatively low cost of living allow our students to obtain an outstanding education at a reasonable price. Compare your options and be the judge. Every student admitted to William & Mary Law School is considered for merit-based scholarships and fellowships.

During the admission process, we look for students who have strong academic backgrounds and a sharp intellect, but we also look for those with drive, commitment, and compassion. Each student is someone carefully selected from among many to study law at William & Mary and, for us, each student is important.

Hometown: Mechanicsville, VA
Degree: B.S., Old Dominion University, 2013
Summer 2015 Employment: Khulumani Support Group (Johannesburg, South Africa)

I would choose William & Mary Law School again because William & Mary embodies what a law school should be. The academic environment here allows me to build on my strengths, while encouraging me to step outside of my comfort zone. I’m certain the experience I have gained here will prove to be invaluable to my legal career.
You’ve learned about us. Now we want to learn about you.
