INTRODUCTION AND EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

Welcome to William & Mary Law School’s Externship Program. Recognizing that supervision and mentoring of externs take considerable time and effort, we greatly appreciate your participation. You play an important role in our mission to educate students and to prepare them to be outstanding citizen-lawyers. We are confident your involvement will be enjoyable and rewarding for you and our students.

This Handbook provides information about our externship program’s objectives and requirements. We hope it will assist you in partnering with externs to assure a beneficial educational experience.

William & Mary Law School offers externships for J.D. students who have completed at least one full academic year and for LL.M. students who have completed at least one full semester.

Externships are educational experiences that complement traditional classroom learning. They aid in enhancing skills in research, problem solving, and written and oral communication; exercising professional and ethical responsibilities to clients and the legal system; learning about different practice settings; and developing other professional skills needed for competent and ethical participation as a member of the legal profession. Externships also offer potential for client contact, writing samples, and exposure to a broad range of substantive and procedural law.

Externs are not necessarily entitled to a job at the conclusion of an externship with your organization.

Learning under the instruction of a licensed attorney, judge, legislator, certified mediator, or an individual otherwise qualified to supervise, externs forge a link between theory and practice. They apply classroom knowledge to resolving actual problems and establish mentoring relationships with field supervisors. In certain instances externs may be permitted to engage in supervised practice of law under the Supreme Court of Virginia’s Third-Year Practice Rule.

The Externship Program is conducted in compliance with the American Bar Association's Standards and the Association of American Law Schools regulations. Those documents describe the experiential, academic, and instructional requirements that law schools and students must meet to secure ABA and AALS approval.

A student may not earn externship credit and compensation for the same period of time with the same organization. This rule permits unpaid, credit-bearing hours for part of a semester and compensation for hours completed during another part of the semester. Credit-bearing and compensated hours may not be commingled, however. A student must complete all externship credit hours before starting compensated hours, or vice-versa. This policy permits the field supervisor’s organization to reimburse a student for reasonable externship-related expenses (e.g., mileage, gas, public transportation, parking, copying, printing, meals).

EXTERNSHIP DESCRIPTIONS

William & Mary offers the following externships. All externships are offered during summer, fall, and spring semesters and are eligible for 1, 2, or 3 credits per semester.

Federal Government Externship with executive or legislative agencies, Congressional committees, and members of Congress.
Judicial Externship with judges, hearing officers, courts, and organizations that provide research, educational, and management services to judges and courts.

Nonprofit Organization Externship with civil legal services/legal aid organizations and U.S. private, nonprofit, 501(c)(3) organizations. Externships with U.S. private, nonprofit organizations with IRS status other than 501(c)(3) are not eligible. Organizations outside the U.S. qualify if they are nonprofit organizations that would qualify for 501(c)(3) status if they were U.S. organizations.

Private Practice/In House Counsel Externship with solo practitioners, law firms, and in-house law departments of corporations and trade associations.

Prosecutor Externship with state and local prosecutors.

Public Defender Externship with federal, state, and local public defenders.

State/Local Government Externship with state or local government agencies and offices, such as city/county attorneys; attorneys general; executive or legislative agencies; and state legislators. Placements with prosecutors and public defenders are covered by their respective externships described above.

U.S. Attorney Externship with the civil or criminal divisions of U.S. Attorney offices.

Virginia Attorney General Externship with the divisions and sections of that office.

CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

Each credit requires the extern to devote 40 externship hours to assisting your organization. Hours must be spread over at least five weeks. Travel to/from the externship site does not count toward the 40 hours per credit.

In addition to completing the specified number of hours, externs submit journals and a final report. Externs attend mandatory classes. Summer externs submit two additional journals in lieu of classes. Time devoted to classes, journals, and reports does not count toward the 40 hours per credit.

Because students’ journals and reports include candid reflections about their externships – but do not include confidential client information – field supervisors cannot review journals or reports.

ACADEMIC POLICIES

Externships are graded Pass/Fail.

In-person vs. remote externships: Externships are not a proxy for remote research and writing positions, and the externship program’s educational and professional development objectives are best accomplished through in-person externships. At least 75% of the student’s externship hours therefore must be in-person at the externship site, in court, or at client sites. Because of potential ongoing Covid concerns, however, externships involving fewer than 75% in-person externship hours will be permitted for Fall 2021 and Spring 2022 semesters under these circumstances:

- Approved externships will include those where a student cannot complete at least 75% in-person externship hours based on the field supervisor’s certification that (a) the office is operating “fully/primarily remotely because of Covid”; and (b) fewer than 75% of the student’s externship hours therefore will be completed in-person at the externship site, in court, or at client sites.
- Externship faculty will not define or monitor “fully/primarily remote.” Rather, they will rely on the field supervisor’s good faith certification.
- Fully/primarily remote externships must be because of Covid. The exception to the 75% in-person requirement does not apply when an externship is fully/primarily remote for reasons unrelated to Covid (e.g., fully/primarily remote operations were the office’s pre-Covid policy, the office operates fully/primarily remotely for employee or employer convenience but not because of Covid, the office does not have space or personnel to accommodate an in-person extern, a student prefers to extern remotely).
- The field supervisor will certify as of the date of the externship offer.
- The policy is subject to change if conditions worsen.

Limits on observational time: Externships – whether in-person or fully/partially remote – in which the student’s role is primarily or exclusively observational will not be approved. To be approved, at least 75% of the student’s hours must be non-observational (e.g., research, writing, client/witness interviews, constituent relations, preparation for/conducting hearings, trials, and appeals). To count toward the 25% maximum observation hours, observation must include substantive, reflective discussion between you and your field supervisor.

Partisan political duties and lobbying prohibited: Externships with partisan political organizations, involving partisan political activities, or involving lobbying are not eligible for externship credit. Students are, however, permitted to extern for an elected official or legislative body when the extern’s duties will involve the official’s/body’s legislative or executive – rather than campaign/political – duties.

Personal relationships with field supervisors: A student may not extern for a field supervisor to whom the student is related. Nor may a student extern for a field supervisor with whom the student has a relationship that potentially could affect the supervisor’s ability to objectively and impartially supervise/evaluate the student, even when the relationship does not actually affect the supervisor’s ability to do so.

Multiple externships with same organization: When a student has externed with an organization and wants to extern again with the same organization, the student may do so when the student’s performance in the previous externship was at least satisfactory and the Externship Objectives and Site Agreement explains how the student’s experience in the subsequent externship will be materially different from the previous externship. A student may extern a maximum of two times with the same organization.

Concurrent credit and compensation prohibited: A student may not earn (a) externship credit and compensation or (b) externship credit and summer fellowship funding for the same period of time with the same organization. This rule permits unpaid, credit-bearing hours for part of a semester and compensation or summer fellowship funding for hours completed during another part of the semester. Credit-bearing hours and compensated/fellowship hours may not be commingled, however. A student must complete all externship credit hours before starting compensated/fellowship hours, or vice-versa.

When the field placement organization reimburses externs for reasonable externship-related expenses (e.g., mileage, gas, public transportation, parking, copying, printing, meals), this rule also permits that reimbursement.

Use of proprietary research products: As of April 1, 2021, LexisNexis permits use of its services in unpaid, credit-bearing externships via the student password.

As of April 1, 2021, Westlaw permits use of its services in unpaid, credit-bearing externships via the student password. The externship must be with a nonprofit, non-government entity.

If a student uses other electronic, proprietary research products or databases, it is the student’s responsibility to determine providers’ policies on using their products for an externship.

No billing for externs’ assistance: Externs’ time, expenses, and use of any electronic, proprietary research products or databases cannot be billed to clients of the externs’ host organization.

ARRANGING AN EXTERNSHIP

Arranging an externship is a five-step process:

1) The student contacts an organization from among the Law School’s pre-approved externships, from a referral provided by the Associate Dean, or from the student’s own network. Regardless of the method of contact, the organization determines the application process, selects the extern, and notifies the extern of the selection. The Law School does not select externs.

2) When the organization selects an extern, the field supervisor and extern complete an Externship Objectives and Site Agreement (EOSA). The student will provide the EOSA to you. The Statement of Skills and Values from the ABA’s MacCrate Report is included as an appendix to this Handbook; the Statement of Skills and Values may be helpful in formulating the extern’s objectives.

3) The student registers for the Externship course.

4) The extern submits the completed EOSA to the Law School’s Externship Office for approval.

5) The Associate Dean approves the EOSA.

FIELD SUPERVISORS’ RESPONSIBILITIES

Field supervisors are an essential part of the extern’s education and professional development. Field supervisors should have sufficient experience, training, authority, and availability to assure that externs have meaningful opportunities to participate in activities that will enhance their knowledge and professional development, to receive substantive assignments, and to get meaningful instruction and feedback.
To assure consistent compliance with ABA, AALS, and William & Mary policies, field supervisors may not modify course requirements or academic policies or read students’ journals or reports.

The following information is offered to help achieve these goals.

A. Conducting an Initial Meeting with the Extern

It is important that the field supervisor conduct an initial meeting with the extern before the extern starts. We request that you cover the following items and others you deem important for your office:

• What is the overarching mission of your office? An explanation of your mission, services, clients, and office structure will provide a context for the extern’s experience and for classroom discussion.

• If your entity is a private nonprofit organization or a government agency, what are the funding sources?

• How will you and the extern mutually assure that the objectives in the Externship Objectives and Site Agreement will be achieved? Setting up a schedule of periodic meetings will help to assure the objectives are met or to modify the objectives if necessary.

• What will the extern’s schedule be? What is your office’s inclement weather policy? Which meetings, proceedings, or other events should the extern plan to attend? There may be days of the week or times of day that will be best for meeting your and the extern’s objectives. We realize that not everything may be scheduled in advance, but the more that can be set ahead of time, the better you and the extern will be able to plan. The extern will want to know how and to whom to communicate if illness or other unanticipated absence conflicts with the agreed upon schedule.

• What are your expectations for confidentiality and professional responsibility? We and our students take very seriously matters of professionalism, ethics, and integrity. Externs are expected to abide by your jurisdiction’s Rules of Professional Conduct; please remind them of that expectation.

• What is the “chain of command”? Understanding lines of authority will help the extern seek guidance for prioritizing assignments and determine whom to contact if you are unavailable.

• Which of your office colleagues should the extern meet? Introduction to others in the office will allow the extern to feel part of your team.

• How will timely, constructive, specific feedback be provided for each assignment? Scheduling periodic meetings will help assure that the extern receives appropriate feedback. Please refer to “Providing Feedback” below for additional information.

• When will midpoint and final evaluation meetings occur? Who will conduct them?

B. Assigning Projects to the Extern

Externs are happy to pitch in to meet your office’s needs. It is important, however, that the vast majority of externs’ experience be substantive (e.g., researching, writing, interviewing clients and witnesses, drafting documents, assisting with discovery, or analyzing legislation). Please ensure that administrative support duties are minimized and incidental to the extern’s substantive experiences.
When you assign projects, please inform the extern about office resources (e.g., templates, brief banks, specialized research tools), format of the final product (oral vs. written, formal vs. informal, draft vs. final version), and due date. That will enable the extern to meet your expectations and to complete the assignment independently and with minimal supervision.

We also recommend that you provide the extern with some context for each assignment. The assignment may be focused (e.g., whether an agency relationship exists), but the underlying context may be broad (e.g., whether an employment discrimination claim is meritorious). Having that context will help the extern understand the practical impact of the assignment and how it fits into the big picture.

An extern may assist more than one member of your office. If someone other than the field supervisor assigns projects to an extern, the field supervisor should first approve the assignment to assure that it will fit into the extern’s overall assignment load.

C. Safeguarding Against Unauthorized Practice of Law

Please be vigilant that the extern does not engage in the unauthorized practice of law (UPL). Generally, the extern will not engage in UPL if hours are completed under the direct supervision of a lawyer licensed in the jurisdiction in which the student is externing.

D. Providing Feedback

Our students are extremely talented, accomplished, and personable. They set very high standards for their educational and professional development. We, too, have very high standards for them. We expect our students to be reliable, responsive, courteous, respectful, and professional. Their final product always should be first-rate. We know that you share these standards. Timely, specific, constructive feedback is essential for externs to meet your, their, and our standards.

Externs want and need feedback, both positive and corrective. Please provide feedback to the extern after the completion of each assignment.

It is also important that you conduct at least two evaluation sessions – one at the midpoint of the externship and another, final evaluation meeting at the conclusion of the externship. Discuss both the substance of the extern’s assignment and the processes the extern used. Point out explicitly what the extern did well and areas for improvement. Midpoint evaluations do not require any written reports or notifications to the Externship office. The form you will use to complete the final evaluation is available here.

Having externs evaluate themselves is a useful way to initiate feedback. An extern’s self-evaluation provides an opportunity for you to build on the extern’s self-assessment. Self-assessment also encourages the extern to move through the learning process from completing projects to analyzing performance to identifying goals for future performance. In addition, this process reinforces a pattern of reflective thinking.

Field supervisors’ general statements such as “good job” or “you’ll do better with practice” – by themselves – do not help the extern to learn. Likewise, a “no news is good news” approach does not contribute to the externs’ educational/professional growth. Externs will learn best from timely, specific feedback and examples.
We recommend that you begin your feedback session with a general statement about the extern’s overall performance. Follow this general assessment with specific comments. For example, in discussing an extern-conducted client interview, a statement, “You developed a nice rapport with your client” would be more meaningful if supplemented with something like “You made the client comfortable when you said, ‘I can see that you are concerned about this, and I am going to do everything I can to assist you.’”

ADDRESSING POTENTIAL PROBLEMS

In virtually all externships, field supervisors and externs have beneficial experiences and enjoy a successful mentor/extern relationship. On rare occasions, however, the externship does not go as smoothly as everyone would like. Please contact the Associate Dean as soon as you determine that you and the extern are not able to resolve a problem. Similarly, if an extern has a concern we ask that the student first contact you for resolution, absent compelling circumstances.

SHARING YOUR SUGGESTIONS FOR THE EXTERNSHIP PROGRAM

We welcome your ideas for enhancing the externship program’s procedures or substance. Please share your thoughts with us.

Thank you for the significant time, energy, and effort you devote to supervising William & Mary Law externs. We appreciate your participation in our shared educational mission.

NONDISCRIMINATION POLICY

Unless otherwise constrained by law, William & Mary is committed to providing an environment for its students and employees that is free from (1) discrimination based on any personal factor unrelated to qualifications or performance such as, without limitation, race or color, citizenship, national origin or ethnicity, ancestry, religion or creed, political affiliation or belief, age, sex or sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, disability, marital status, pregnancy status, parental status, height, weight, military service, veteran status, caretaker status, or family medical or genetic information; and (2) harassment, including sexual harassment. William & Mary also provides reasonable accommodations for qualified individuals with disabilities as required by law.

In fulfillment of this policy, by using the services of William & Mary Law School’s Externship Office, and by hosting a William & Mary extern, extern organizations acknowledge that their externship practices are consistent with this policy.
The student will complete a portion of the Externship Objectives and Site Agreement and email it to you. When you receive the agreement, please complete your portion after consultation with the student. Then email the form with your completed portion to the student.
